A Verse of Time

Sourav Sarkar

I want to do something in life
I want to write a verse of time
One may forget me
One may deny my existence
But my words will be recalled
By this river that have seen my heart Flowing with so many thoughts That even not counted,
That even not portrayed Because of my restrain That I have learned for years
And have observed people thoroughly
In the villages and in the towns
You may not have seen those unimportant factors
I have seen them with utter faith
That some day I will write for them Too many words come to me but I fail to put them In the order I have seen, you may not find happiness in that ,you may not find arguing facts between words and deeds because they are conflicting in your mind and you are always escaping them just an old page of library you see history is not made like that what we see today shall not come back shall not come back we have tried to record those blank pages but we have to realize them as reality, when I go to see the boats in the river always see one man is driving that soul in the midst of water I find happiness in clear stream
They do not hurt anybody
They flow like life
Sometimes I feel worry about past But I return immediately To ponder over my words
They are my kin
As I am growing with time Sky is getting larger Than my belief
Actually I am getting closer
To that muse
Who has told me to draw natural imagery
From the tears of poor
I shall hide my desires
To find my path
To recall verse of birth.

Biography of Sourav Sarkar:

Sourav Sarkar lives in Cooch Behar district, West Bengal, INDIA. He is a young poet of 30. Post graduate from St. Joseph’s college Darjeeling in English Literature. Fore mostly he is a poet and he is Writing in both Bengali and English language. His poems so far published in the countries like England, India, Bangladesh, America, Canada, Trinidad, etc. He is a published writer of two books-DUTI SOHOR O KICHU KOBITA (first Bengali collection of poetry) and his first micro novel- THE PURI SELLER both published in the year 2016.