Inklings-Saplings

Dr. Katta Rajamouly
Professor of English,
Ganapathy Engineering College,
Warangal, Andhra Pradesh, India.

Inklings are the flying wings
From the serene ocean of the mind;
They are the growing saplings
With the tender roots in the ground;
Their dawn, gleam and bloom
For the growth of glitter in the sky;
They transform in exuberance
From the caterpillar to the butterfly;
They fondly and lovely dress
The foliage of felicitous expressions;
Their dreams are in infinitude
For the dream-buds of high missions;
They fill the atmosphere of joy
With the fragrance of right evolution;
Their struggle for perpetuation
With the seeds of didactic messages;
They love echo and reflection
Of the flowers of sights and sounds;
Their hues and views are rich
To attract the bees of reading brains;
They have no vested interests
For they bestow the shades of peace;
They crave for fructification

In offering the fruits of imagination;
They pride for joyous excellence
For the nectar in lessons of substance;
They have the lives of their own
Through temperance of permanence;
They have relation and correlation
Of the beauty sensuous and supernal.
