Roadside Dwellers

Dr. Divya Gupta
Asst. Professor,
Dept. of English,
GLA University, Mathura.

Flesh, shit, spit, phlegm rigged in calcium cages
Survive on ail, burning and freezing twins above under the tarpaulin shed.

We, the corollary of urbanization and colonization,
targeted by mechanization.

Farmers allured by greedy good doers,
Surrender their lives to a shining clutches of vultures.
Where patience and endurance is a virtue,
where joy and happiness is a curfew.

Bound in the shackles of emotional dilemma,
sound that echoes their plight and trauma.
Ragpicking, searching gold from the garbage dump,
Pale and dull faces, full of dream's chunk

Don't trammel them with poverty and illiteracy,
They are stronger than our expectancy.
Soon they will break those chains
And quench their thirst with theft and revenge.

Revolving in the vicious circle of pains,
They shriek in agony becoming insane.

Roadside Dwellers

Break O Break the dungeon's gate,

Till they vent up their ire,

And burn the world entire.
