Hope in Difficult Times

Shweta Chaudhary

As I see clouds forming
With thunder and dark
They appear dooming
Its mist and gloomy everywhere.
As I see upward at every edge
There is no crack
Where light could seep
Tears bore my heart heavy.
But wait I hear a sound within
A roar, a rush, a fire flaming
At rises and extinguishes
At times it rushes into my vein
And I feel my pain, sorrow
A vague, meaningless trap therein
Or is it some thin curtain?
Surrounding me all over certain!
It narrows my sight
And I fail each day to see the light;
Kept away by the clouds.
But o clouds of dark, despair
There are flames and rush I feel
It will crack from the depths of me
And will travel through every inch

Hope in Difficult Times

Purge they will from my eyes
And burn those curtain circling
Lightening every inch around,
You prepare!

Shweta Chaudhary is a budding writer. She started writing during her graduation days at Miranda House, Delhi University. In her 3rd year of graduation, she did an online content writing internship for 3 months with Scribido Magazine, placed in Maharashtra. Then after completing her graduation in 2013, she did a paid content writing internship with Temple Direct which is an IIT Mumbai foundation. Her passion for writing could never be quenched thereafter. She did her masters in English Literature from MKP College, Dehradun (Hemwati Nandan Bahuguna Garhwal University) where she was actively involved in poetry recitation at various extra-curricular activities. She also presented papers in National Seminars. After successfully completing her Masters, she qualified NET exam July 2016 in English Literature. She is currently working on research paper in the field of spiritualism and education.
