The Crows no Longer Spread their Wings

Dr. Tze-Min Tsai

That Crows in the Wulai Mountain
No longer spread wings
Not because they are not black enough
Nor the wings under the sun shine are not strong enough
No longer can easily show off again that naturally wild
In the past
Flip the seeds, attached to the planting season
Fall on the back of cattle
Chase the insects that have been plucked by the plow
But now
Eat too full of those unnatural artificial food
Eventually, the walnut trees no longer bear the walnut
This unsustainable bleak autumn
How to reserve for the cold winter
Too much artificial food given the forgotten walnut
Buried in the back mountain last year
The opportunity to germinate and
Growing into a new walnut trees
When give up the country activities
Flew to the city foraging
The discarded fruit in the park
The residue in the rubbish
All into the mouth to become delicious food
Feathers rich
Never far from the nest
They are so contented
No longer fully spread the wings
No longer fly high
