Visit to Jaipur

Bibin Mathew Sebastian

Assistant Professor on Contract,
Post Graduate & Research Department of English
Devamatha College, Kuravilangad, Kerala.

Last 'Saturday' I visited Jaipur,
The pink city, the city of palaces and forts,
Same as the folk.
They were traditional, old and giant beautiful setup.
Structures also showed the danger in approaching it.
It looked as a Mount Sinai.

I met a 'Rajput King' in a fort,
He asked me my caste.
I told that am a 'Mangoman' who is casteless.
But, being a Christian was classified a 'Dalit' convert.

I also had a sumptuous lunch,
They asked me am a 'Veg or Non Veg'
But had traditional food,
It seemed as if an Ambrosia.

My friend told me an idiom on the way
'When elephants pass DOGS bark'
The dog was faithful,
The 'Royalty' of elephant matters a lot.

The day had a denouement,
With a Foucauldian discourse of 'the pilgrimage'.
'Salvation?' is it possible or not?
May be or may not?
