Love Conquers Hate

Jake Cosmos Aller

They say that love conquers hate
And that good always win in the end
But sometimes I wonder about hate

I always thought that my love
For my wife would last forever
Since I first met my love

Love at first sight
As the girl I was dreaming of for eight years
Flew into my life with such brilliant light

Our love burning as bright as a million stars
Consuming us both in its brilliant flame
As if our love were made of cosmic flames transplanted from the farthest stars

But true love sometimes turns to true hate
And what was wonderful on that first date becomes despicable over time
What was once cute on that first date becomes disgusting as she become our mate

What was once love at first sight
Turns to darkness and resentment
And then full-blown hatred
And nothing but the darkest night

And the light of a million stars
Is replaced by a darkling night
That consumes one's soul

I look at my wife every dawning day
And see that light is still burning bright
And the momentary darkness
And yes, potential hatred is kept at bay
By the brilliant rays of light

Hatred, resentments dispelled yet again
By the brilliance of our love
That the million suns of love

Are burning yet again

And I pray constantly
To all Gods on our mark that our love continues constantly
And that our love will conquer the dark
