Morals

Aditi Kataria

The obligations keep me chained
from attaining what I can, I have been refrained.
Long have I tried to find a solution
but appears that the pains will end only at my execution!

And I will be sacrificed
on the altar of moral
which once made me wised
helping me in the struggles I've won.

Morals have kept us together
though in our hearts we have distances.
I wish they had more freedom feather
and permitted me to take the chances.

I regret settling less for what I deserved
because the moral obligations kept me reserved.
Sure, morals keep me humane
but in their name, I have constantly been slain!

No more can I bear,
my soul shrieks with fear.
The morals, now I falter,
I will question them, I will startle
the blinded illogical notions
as I have already lived in Hell, in portions!

I have seen worse, I will question them!
It might turn my life into a gem.
Morals have enjoyed monopoly
I have suffered, they have made me lonely.

The ridiculous morals will no more be entertained
while the worth while will be respected.
The devils will no longer devour, all the feigned
morals will be exposed and prohibited.

The unwanted sacrifices will not ruin
the life of innocent. Virtues will win.
My pains have had me tutored
and now, the feigned morals will be butchered.
