Epistolary Exercise with Year Twenty Twenty

Rimmi Chakravarty
Asst Professor
Humanities
Siliguri Institute of Technology

Dear Twenty Twenty
It seems just a few days we welcomed you
Braving the cold chill of December,
Who knew you could be attacked with a dangerous flu?
Who knew it would wage against us a deadly war?
To this it's your answer
We have been served right
As you wanted the birds to take on their long flight
You stopped the artificial birds on the runaway
From boarding the passengers to reach on their destination
Lockdown might be some sort of frustration
Then our mother Earth needed to heal
You have taken every responsibility to make us feel
The importance of our forests friends
Or else they might have meted their ends
This world is for all; big or small
Our world cannot endure any more gall
It's you who have compelled us to keep our normal schedules at bay
And appreciate from our window panes when our forests friends on the streets smile and lay
They too might love to come out for their sojourn in the towns and cities
Dear we then stop all our activities
And wish you get over the flu
Under the vast blue
