Dream of a Woman

Shweta Maurya

Assistant Professor

Sahu Ramswaroop Mahila Mahavidyalay
(Mahatma Jyotiba Phule Rohilkhand University)

Living in the shackles,
Fighting in the battle,
Everyone knows her name,
As the “Woman” as the pain.
Lives behind doors under suppressed scream,
Still, she hopes for a beautiful dream.

The dream to breath in the air of life,
Not to be just mere as a wife.
The dream to live life on her condition,
Founded mansion on her own ambition.

Living in the silence,
Bearing the offense,
Doing the nonsense,
She proves wrong to the trickery of time,
She understands still the gist of sublime.

One day, she will break the chain,
One day, she will run like blood of vein.
There will be fire in her heart,
She will breakthrough a new start.

Shattering all the limits,
She will shine like sun.
Flying her dream like kite,
In the infinite sky she will be one.

Because, she is the master of her fate,
Because, she is the captain of her state.

Biographical Note:

Miss. Shweta Maurya is Assistant Professor at Sahu Ramswaroop Mahila Mahavidyalaya, the affiliated college of Mahatma Jyotiba Phule Rohilkhand University, Bareilly, Uttar-Pradesh, India with the specialisation in English Literature, Women's Studies and Gender Sensitisation. Writing poetry in both the languages: English as well as Hindi is my interest and passion, which soothes my heart and brightens my skill of writing and understanding society in different perspectives, which is unseen by the others.
