Conversation with Baudelaire

Prajwal PandaLiterature Student, BHU.

Charles! take these Flowers back

Paris abandoned you for Evil but I have not, let me return your appetite,

You left in poems and some in me strolling through filth and fever, greyest rain of eyes, perched my lungs blanketed with faces and voices, I fear my tongue needs you ---- Baudelaire

I, People and Cities

weep blood upon your tomb and a creature like me curse the age and season, that lost You Poetry made me your devotee, and your poems, Temple

Lend me your half-heart, allow me to pound one last time for you

Forget Jeanne, nobody remembers you

I, alone love you, my cold Friend!

Oh Hell! Oh Heaven! together,

The Criterion

Decor me with flowers, perfume and words

Garner me with him, rest me with his poems,

I strode in thoughts, pages and disease,

Cried for Autumns and Breeze,

Just to die in, for, with him --- Baudelaire

Sleeping in this Grave, comforts my soul

For I have torn ink and pages in memory of You --- Paris wants me dead now,

They buried me, for loving you,

In my poems, you are free and in yours, I am

Night is here with us, tell her to hide

I cannot breathe Friend, am I dying --- Baudelaire
