

Solace

Dr. Simran Koul
Assistant Professor.

Solace descends in argent rays of morn,
Where faith, long tried, is quietly reborn.
It moves through doubts with equanimous grace,
And leaves resilience time cannot efface.
No dirge it sings, but hymns of tempered fire,
That lift the will beyond its frail desire.
In tacit pauses, benedictions lie,
A covenant the steadfast stars imply.
It schools the heart in patient fortitude,
Transmuting ache to luminous amplitude.
Where trials convene, it drafts a chartered way,
And maps the dark to thresholds of the day.
Solace confers a calm, august, and sure,
A poise no transient tumult can obscure.
From ashen nights it coaxes nascent green,
Till hope stands clear, immaculate, serene.
It crowns endurance with a lucid sight,
And names persistence kin to dawning light.
Thus, bearing trust as talisman and guide,
We stride with morn, unconquered, open-eyed.
For even fate, when mercy finds its voice,
Learns strength is born where courage makes a choice.
So let the soul, emboldened, upward press,
And greet its dawn with confident caress.
